

Project Management Training Alliance (PMTA) Code of Conduct

The PMTA Code of Conduct is governed by our Values. Each PMTA representative (identified as an individual registered on the PMTA website) must uphold these values.

Cooperation

We believe that mutual cooperation will lead to the enhancement of the project management discipline. By working together, we enhance the quality of services our members deliver and produce more value to learners.

Transparency

By working together in an open and transparent way, we continually improve the project management discipline. We believe that the sharing of information is key to improving the work we do.

Trust

We strive to conduct ourselves in a manner where our actions and decisions enhance the trustworthiness of our work. Our ultimate goal is to be a source of project management excellence.

Integrity

We take responsibility for our actions and their consequences.

Collegiality

We treat others with the utmost level of respect and professionalism, to include refraining from making broad characterizations of people or organizations based on past experience or personal prejudice.

Sharing of Information

PMTA representatives are encouraged to freely share information with other representatives. Unless specifically allowed, information shared must stay within the circle of PMTA.

Violations of the PMTA Code of Conduct

If a member representative knowingly violates any of the areas of this Code of Conduct, their organization will be suspended from the Project Management Training Alliance and their membership dues will not be refunded.
